Opening speech: The future of education... begins here

Session Summary:

Dr. Amal Al-Qahtani's opening remarks consisted of five main points:

Pillar 1: Vision and Strategic Direction

- The Ministry of Education – UAE envisions empowering schools and educators through technology and artificial intelligence to create exceptional learning experiences.
- The school is redefined as a hub for innovation, creativity, and continuous learning, not just a place for teaching.

Pillar 2: Innovation and Artificial Intelligence in Education

- AI is a partner, not a replacement for teachers, enhancing data-driven personalization and learner support.
- Key initiatives highlighted:
 1. Empowering educators with AI competencies.
 2. Developing digital curricula aligned with innovation.
 3. Designing smart assessment systems responsive to learners' differences.
 4. Creating innovative learning environments that promote well-being and creativity.

Pillar 3: School Leadership as the Engine of Change

- Inspirational leadership is essential to turn vision into tangible school realities.
- Empowered leaders drive innovation, motivate teachers, and sustain meaningful educational transformation.

Pillar 4: The Student at the Core

- The learner remains the central focus of the educational process.
- The goal is to nurture critical thinkers and problem-solvers who can create opportunities and shape the future.

Pillar 5: Recommendations and Conclusion

- Encourages collaboration and knowledge exchange through international forums such as GESS.
- Concludes that the future of education begins with every idea that believes in change and every hand that helps build tomorrow.

UAE Skills Economy

Session Summary:

This session will take the form of a fireside chat exploring the skills economy and the current state of skills in the UAE. Drawing on research and data from the Massar Al Ghurair Program of the Abdulla Al Ghurair Foundation, the discussion will examine emerging skills identified through labor market insights, what these trends mean for higher education institutions and employers, and the key priorities for upskilling youth to prepare them for a rapidly evolving job market. The conversation will also delve into the concept of the skills economy and the growing shift toward skills-based hiring.

Fog to Focus: The Secret of Strategy That Works

Session Summary:

Strategy Isn't a Document. It's a Decision-Making Habit.

Why do most strategic plans gather dust within weeks?

Because they're seen as documents to complete, not living tools to guide decision-making. This session is a practical, provocative exploration of how to lead your school out of fog and into focus with strategy that sticks. You'll leave with a framework that helps your team act with clarity, not confusion.

Why learning oracy skills is as important for school leaders as it is for students

Session Summary:

In this session, Dr Helen Wright will draw on her experience working with senior and middle leaders in schools across the world, to explore why school leaders at every level benefit from focusing on their own oracy skills. She will explain how research into our unconscious biases makes the case for adults to develop their oracy skills, and will share insights, based on psychometric processes, that demonstrate how school leaders can learn to communicate more effectively with one another.

Leading from the 'Ledge' ... Extreme Leadership in a new world order...

Session Summary:

The 'ask' of leadership today sometimes exceeds the boundaries of everything that most leaders know, have known, or have ever imagined. Perhaps responding to the wildest imaginings of a city designer or driven to think differently and immediately by the most extreme of circumstances, or propelled the adrenaline rush of exhilarating opportunities, here emerge the skills and responses that cannot be learned, where authentic leadership steps up and the greatest leadership training of all – 'learnership' takes centre stage.

This presentation provides a 'walk through' of the impact of such experiences for leadership, testing the mettle of the most resilient leaders to drive catalytic change, retain humility and humanity in equal measure and approach leadership differently. This is 'Extreme Leadership' in action!

Empowering Early Childhood Innovation: Abu Dhabi's Role in Advancing EdTech Startups

Session Summary:

Abu Dhabi is positioning itself as a global hub for innovation in early childhood development, with government-led initiatives that bridge policy, technology, and impact. This session explores how the Emirate supports EdTech and early childhood startups to scale solutions that empower children, families, and communities. Highlighting the Anjal Z program, Abdulla Almehsin will share how Abu Dhabi is fostering an ecosystem where entrepreneurs, policymakers, and educators collaborate to design future-ready environments for learning and play. The talk will showcase success stories, lessons learned, and the broader vision of how government leadership can catalyze meaningful change in education and child development across the MENA region and beyond.

The Human Edge in the Age of AI

Session Summary:

AI is everywhere and education is feeling the impact. From lesson planning to marking, the tools are impressive, but the real question is: what can't AI do? That is where the human edge comes in.

In this keynote, Olly Lewis will cut through the noise to show how schools can harness AI without losing sight of what really matters: empathy, creativity, connection, and the teacher's role as a guide. Drawing on real school experience and global trends, Olly will explore how AI can reduce workload, open doors for inclusion, and free teachers to focus on what only humans can do.

This is a session about balance, impact, and vision. In the age of AI, it is not the technology that defines learning, it is us.

The Data in the Shadows

Session Summary:

Matthew reinterprets 'assessment' as 'getting to know each student', and 'data' as all the fragments of their individual stories. In this talk, he will give a brief introduction to what he calls "Antidata", a pioneering new approach to data and assessment which intentionally seeks out the fragments which can so easily fall through the cracks and slip into the shadows. After all, without those often missing fragments, how can we ever hope fully to see, hear and know our students, and to help them to belong?
